

Hive's initiative supports Royal Melbourne Hospital Foundation

When artist Georgie Gall approached the Hive Gallery to enable her next exhibition to be a fundraiser for the Royal Melbourne Hospital Foundation, it seemed a natural fit for Karen Spreadborough, the curator and director, who has also spent 29 years as a physiotherapist.

"To combine my interest in art and health seemed ideal to say 'yes' to," Karen said, as The Hive aims to build its presence in the community.

launched, with Georgie Gall leading the way with her collection Dawn to Dusk, which features tranquil paintings of waterways, inspired by the changing light of day.

Restricted to Melbourne during the long COVID Lockdown, as time wore on, Georgie "found her paintings became more meditative, and more of an escape into a calm and beautiful world on the canvas".

"This is a large body of work from Georgie, featuring her iconic water birds and signature use of texture within her abstract scenes of oceans and water," Karen said.

"The paintings are serene and no surprise that they already grace the walls of the Royal Melbourne Hospital I.C.U. and waiting room thanks to Georgie's generosity.

"They add a beautiful reprieve from a challenging environment."

Ed Smith, director of the RMH Foundation was present to open the Exhibition which runs until May 1.

Initially, the funds raised will go towards purchasing a Wide-Field Digital Imaging Camera that will aid diagnostic accuracy and treatment of eye patients.

"Without healthy eyesight it is, of course, harder to appreciate visual art," Ed said.
